LEGAL 500

The Charity Commission is keen for all charities to understand that good governance is fundamental to their success. Ensuring that trustees are fully aware of their legal duties both under their constitutional documents and in charity law generally is crucial, and charity governance training addresses that requirement. More than that, trustee training enables a governing body to identify its own unique priorities and challenges, and then work together in a refreshed and constructive way to find solutions and action points.

Our training provides both new and experienced charity trustees with the legal training that they need to be compliant with charity law as well as the skills needed to fulfil their roles and ensure the success of the charity.

Below are some examples of topics we can cover:

- key provisions in your governing document
- trustees' legal duties (including fiduciary)
- governance structure of your charity
- stakeholders and the public benefit requirement
- managing conflicts of interest
- Charity Governance Code and diagnostic tool
- risk management
- serious incident reporting
- Charity Commission guidance and how to navigate it
- policies and procedures
- Charity Commission statutory enquiries and the lessons to be learned
- freedom of speech
- safeguarding
